Kentucky broke its record of coal production with an output for 1914 of 20, 382,763 short tons, valued at the mines at $20,852,463, the year's output exceeding the previous high mark in 1913 by 766,163 tons. The increase was all the more notable because it was made in a year when most of the coal fields of the country showed a decrease, and it was due to activity in coal mining in the eastern part of the state particularly along the Virginia border, and to the construction of new railroads.
